

Commitment to Healthcare Access

Patients are at the heart of the clinical research industry. Offering clinical research as a care option to patients has a clear benefit: access to cutting-edge research in the care of their trusted physician with minimal disruption to their daily lives.

However, reaching patient populations can be a very real challenge. Only Elligo is committed to tackling that challenge head-on by going directly into healthcare communities to connect with practices and patients, decreasing barriers to access and participation, bringing much-needed diversity to trials.

When their community physicians offer clinical research as a care option, instead of having to travel to a site, take time away from work and family, and incur expenses, patients can simply go to their local physician for care. And research has shown that patients prefer to engage in studies with their already-trusted healthcare physicians. With the increased focus in the industry on patient centricity, allowing them this convenience is a winning strategy.

Powered by IntElligo® Research Stack clinical technology, our proprietary state-of-the-art technology platform, only Elligo can access patient and study data to find the right patient population at the right point of care; in all major therapeutic areas and among geographically diverse practices. This enables us to access a wide spectrum of physicians and patients, allowing us to bring in diverse patient populations that would otherwise remain inaccessible.

Beyond patient engagement, clinical research can decrease the overall cost of care for both the patient and the health system. Only Elligo enables access to healthcare for research and commercialization success. As the ultimate healthcare-enabling research organization, we maintain the integrity of the trusted patient-physician relationship, building local healthcare communities and leveraging electronic health records to offer more patients clinical research as a care option.

Elligo's effective solution gives physicians the opportunity to bring clinical research directly to patients, providing hope for better treatments and innovative care to a much wider group of patients, who would otherwise go without them.

About Elligo Health Research®

Elligo Health Research, a healthcare-enabling research organization, uses electronic health records and the trusted patient and physician relationship to ensure all patients have access to clinical research as a care option. Powered by our Goes Direct® approach and novel IntElligo® Research Stack clinical technology, our team provides access to the best healthcare experts, patients, and research technologies. We engage physicians and patients who otherwise would not participate in clinical research and accelerate the development of new pharmaceutical, biotechnology, and medical device and diagnostic products. Learn more at elligodirect.com.

ONLY ELLIGO

www.elligodirect.com | info@elligodirect.com